SECRETARY HENDRY QUILTS REPUBLICAN COMMITTEE

E. R. HENDRY.

Members of the Republican Executive Committee other than the chairman, J. E. Kennedy, are discussing plans for the holding of a meeting during this week for the purpose of preparing and forwarding to Congress a measure for the purpose of defining the terms of the Senators elected last year.

This matter has been allowed to drag along until now there is an intention on the part of the members of the committee to push along affairs until the measure has been prepared and sent on for submission. The course which it is proposed to follow in the distribution of the Senatorships is that which was planned by Senator Brown, in his measure naming those Senators who received the greatest number of votes in each district. This will evenly divide the hold-overs, one of the sufferers being "Bill" White of Maui, who was the long-term Senator whose place was won only after a fight which lasted for several days, and which was a hot one so hot that there was some doubt until the end which way it would come out.

While this perhaps will be the most particular matter before the committee, there will be some talk over the question of proxies. The action of the Territorial Committee will be reviewed, and there promises to be a lively discussion over the matter when it is brought before the Executive Committee. There is a growing feeling that the course of the committee in making only members eligible to hold proxies will receive several jolts in the committee, as it is the opinion of several members that there are reasons why Republicans, other than the members of the committee who represent the various districts, should be privileged to hold proxies.

It is understood that the bill settling the question of the hold-over Senators has been prepared by Senator Cecil Brown and Representative A. G. M. Robertson, and that it will be presented to Congress through a friend of the House Committee on Territories.

United States Marshal E. R. Hendry has resigned as Secretary of the Republican Territorial Committee, and also of the executive committee of that body. The resignation was sent to Chairman Kennedy on December 9 and was to take effect immediately. No action has yet been taken by either committee, as no meetings will be held until the first week of January.

Marshal Hendry was asked yesterday afternoon to confirm the rumor of his resignation.

"I sent in my resignation on Dec. 9," said the ex-Secretary, "but have heard nothing yet from Chairman Kennedy about it. There is too much work for me to do in connection with my duties as Marshal to permit me to continue longer as the Secretary of the Republican committee. By the first of the year campaign work will be mapped out and the Secretary will then have his hands full. There is enough work for one man to do with the campaign work, and I positively cannot give my time to it."

"Furthermore, being a Federal officer under appointment by the President and confirmation by the Senate, it is best that I should not hold office in a political committee. As to who my successor will be I have not the least idea. I am in favor of seeing a man placed in the office who has not a vote—an independent person—who could serve all factions, if there be any, with equal fairness. If I were to be allowed to suggest my successor I would say that J. D. Avery, the assistant secretary, would be one of the best men that could be selected. He has the affairs of the party at his fingers' ends and is a very capable man."

It is also understood that a recent order of the Attorney-General sent out to all persons connected with the Department of Justice, has prompted Marshal Hendry to resign. The order was, in effect, that no person in the Department should accept or hold the office of chairman of any party committee, and doubtless was meant to refer to departmental officers holding lesser offices as well.

The local mosquito (Culex mosquito) is rapidly earning for himself a reputation as a good fellow, which promises to eclipse in time the joyous record of his New Jersey relative. Not a tourist comes here who does not depart ready and willing to furnish frequent testimonials as to the industry and whole-souledness of the little native bugger, which worketh by day nor sleepeth at all o' nights.

A sojourner in the land has written a lengthy epistle to a friend in the office East, which goes forward on the next Coast-bound boat. The letter, which treats at length of the advantages of the Island Paradise, was shown to a reporter yesterday. From it he culled the following tribute to the local order of "skeeters":

"If it were not for the mosquito, the inhabitants of these Islands would suffer from chronic laziness. That energetic little insect, however, keeps one moving at such a lively clip all the time, trying to dodge his little bill, that one's liver has no chance to get congested."

"The mosquitoes are thoroughly organized here, and work in shifts of twelve hours each. One lot comes on at 8 a. m. and knocks off work at 5 p. m. Then the night watch do their trick. There is the day mosquito and the night mosquito. The latter is of a musical turn of mind, singing merrily all the time, and if he does not keep you awake by biting you, he certainly will with his eternal serenade or by tickling you in your ear. They work awfully hard, for they are taught from birth to either drive you from the country, or to drink or a lunatic asylum. The only way to get the best of the Kanaka mosquito is to drink plenty of Spiritus Frumenti, so that the evaporation of alcohol through the pores of the skin will make the little beggar intoxicated before he has time to bite. If this is done he may be observed to alight on a person's person, stagger about like a drunken man, and finally reel over the fleshy precipice and onto the floor."

"Writing about mosquitoes reminds me of a terrible experience I had one night. I was staying at a boarding house on King street, where the mosquitoes were monstrous thick. They had evidently gathered together in double numbers on account of the presence of several fat people in the house. I went to bed as usual, and dozed under the net, a task for all that a man has of fortitude and delicacy, for they lay in wait for you, hang onto your hair and other parts with the tenacity of a mussel to a low water rock, and once under the net, they get in their deadly work."

"Well, on the occasion in question, I took a sheet of fly paper to bed with me, putting it upon the pillow at my side, thinking that the creatures would stick to it. You know what fly paper is—it sticks to whatever it touches, like grim death to a nigger. I don't know exactly how it happened, but I was dreaming that a burglar entered by room and was trying to choke me. In my struggles I must have rolled over onto that pesky fly paper. Anyhow, I awoke and feeling that vile stuff upon my face, yelled as loudly as I could, and aroused everyone in the house, who ran in a body to the scene of the supposed tragedy."

"The first one to enter the room switched on the electricity. I leaped from the bed, carrying the net with me, and the curious spectacle I presented led the people to suspect that I was out of my mind. They looked out and bolted me in. Then they telephoned for the police, who shortly afterwards arrived on the scene, bringing with them the patrol wagon. As an officer was about to open the door, I accidentally knocked over a small table upon which was a quantity of china and glassware."

"The police very naturally thought that I was making things hum generally, and in they pushed, grabbing me and decorating my wrists with handcuffs. Then they bundled me into the 'hurry-up' and took me to the Merchant street headquarters. A doctor was sent for. I could not protest on account of that blessed plaster which covered my mouth and one eye like a garment."

"When the doctor arrived he started to peel off the thing. He got it off all right, and with it came a part of my mustache and sundry pieces of skin. Then he wanted to know why the devil he had been summoned. When I tried to explain I was cut short by being asked if I had a friend to bail me out. I telephoned to my friend, Sam Y—, who came, looking awfully mad, and as he paid over the money, he remarked to me, 'Say! old man, you had better change your brand of whiskey.'

"I borrowed a pair of trousers from a policeman and sneaked home. Next morning my landlady presented me with a bill for damages amounting to $5, and a notice to quit."

"I believe that his Satanic majesty personally superintended these departs of mosquitoes; perhaps they are departed souls, sent back to torment their friends left behind."

"Think goodness, they have one enemy, in the shape of a lizard, which feeds upon them. It is great fun to watch them fasten themselves upon his tail, then there is quite a tug-of-war going on. Sometimes the lizard gets the worst of it; when he finds this to be the case, he sheds his tail and bolts, leaving it with his enemies."

"My friend Tom P— told me that he tried to smoke them out one night, but to his astonishment, he saw them sitting in a row, sneezing fit to choke themselves, but still lively and ready to report for duty. He also alleges that they drove his bulldog out of the house one night. Truly, they are a bold and bloodthirsty species."

The Claudine took quite a large amount of machinery for Huelo. Owing to the southerly winds she did not take much freight for Lahaina, where bad weather is expected, but if the wind keeps as it is she does not expect much trouble at the other ports she is to touch.
